STATE HOSPITAL NURSES GRADU

Exercises Held in Fall of Administration Euilding with Many Presen', r. Pollock Presiding-lass Address ed by Dr. C. E. Stark and Hon. Costello Lippitt Presented Liplomas-Reception at the Close.

For the graduation exercises of the first class to receive diplomas from the Norwich state hospital there were about 100 relatives and friends in the hall on the third floor of the administration building at the institution on Thursday evening. The hall stage had been attractively decorated, the sides being banked with ferns, dahlias and other cut flowers, while there was also a large quantity of sweet peas. Over the front of the stage was the class motto, Perseverance, in light blue with a background of white.

Seated on the platform were President Lippitt of the board of trustess, General Greeley of New Haven and Dr. C. E. Stark, also of the board, Rev. C. A. Northrop and Dr. H. M. Pollock.

Members of the Graduating Class:
After two years of diligent study and careful instruction, of hard and faithful work, you have been found qualified; and tonight present yourselves for the degree of graduate nurse from the Norwich state hospital; and I most heartly congratulate you. For your life work you have chosen one of the oldest of callings—one of the youngest of professions. It is one of the oldest of callings because Eve was the first nurse. After she had persuaded Adam to partake of the forbidden fruit and both had been driven from the Garden of Eden, we find Adam tilling the soil and providing for the family by the sweat of his brow; we find Eve looking after his comfort and welfare and caring for his children. Members of the Graduating Class: aring for his children.
It is one of the youngest of profesions because it is scarcely more than alf a century that need of special inruction in the science and art of ursing has been recognized.

The earliest mention that I have ound for the word nurse is in the tory of Moses in the bulrushes. When Pharmon's daughter found the infant Moses in his basket, Moses' sister ask-ed if she should go find a nurse for the child.

refreshing and wholesome.

The standard of the Ities proved inadequate and inefficient.
Florence Nightingale offered her services to organize a nursing corps. She brought order out of chaos, and her work won the admiration of the world. The Crimean war in Europe and the civil war in this country brought the whole subject of caring for the sick and wounded forcobly before the pub-Florence Nightingale's work tracted wide attention. Now nearly every hospital has such a department. All aim to be good schools; this one is destined to rank among the best. the best.

The Norwich state hospital is young, but it has already attained an enviable reputation; and holding a diplo ble reputation; and holding a diploma from it means something, in addition to the experience of the operating room, and the hospital wards where are treated the various acute diseases such as are found in general hospitals; it means six months' work among the outside poor, where you are brought in contact with the various physicians of the city and conditions in the home in contact with the various physicians of the city, and conditions in the home which tax your ingenuity to the utmost to make your patient comfortable. It also means that you are brought in daily contact with hundreds of the various forms of mental and nervous condition which teach you patience and devotion to your work, which are two of the most essential characteristics of a good nurse.

The calling you have chosen-is the noblest that one can choose, and the work is the most honorable and one of the severest that a woman is called upon to perform. More is demanded from a nurse than from any other upon to perform. More is demanded from a nurse than from any other woman. She must always be cheerful,

Three Classes of Nurses. Now a few moments' talk in refer-ence to your work from my observa-Now a few moments' talk in reference to your work from my observation of nurses and nursing. I divide nurses into three classes—domestic, trained and graduate. The domestic nurse was the result of necessity. When one member of a family became sick some other member cared for the sick one, and when they found this care too great, or perhaps it was the mother who was sick, with only small children in the home—in either case outside assistance was sought. Some woman a the neighborhood who had found it necessary to increase this family income, had let it become known that she would for hire take care of the sick, and her services were sought. Thus originated the domestic nurse. In addition to caring for the sick one, she made herself useful assisting in the household duries of helping put the children to bed; and on the quiet giving sugar piums to please them: thus making more business for the doctor; and, you see making herself useful all around. and, you see making herself useful all around. But sanitation, baths and massage, as applied today, which af-ford such comfort and aid, were un-known to her, and if emergencies arose in the doctor's absence she did not care to take the responsibility, and the neighbors were called in council. But our consciences will not allow us to say one word against the old mami say one word against the old mammy nurse, for to this day we recall with pleasure the lullables that put us to sleep with ourshead resting on her soft, fat shoulder, The trained nurse is the domestic those nurses who, having tact and good judgment, do very good work.

The graduate nurse is one who by careful training and instruction in all the branches pertaining to this work, and much beside experience, is well prepared to care for the sick in a way that gives the best results; and their aid to the physician in the sick room is of the greatest value. When he leaves his patient he feels he also leaves not only a nurse, but a careful, faithful assistant, who will not only faithful assistant, who will not only carry out his instructions, but is able to care for any ordinary emergency which may arise.

I am sorry to say that in some families not accustomed to the graduate nurse a strong prejudice exists. It is a great step from the domestic to the graduate nurse. Your neat white uniforms and thorough systematic work strike them with awe. It is all so different that at first they hardly like it; but if you are tactful they will soon appreciate the value of the graduate nurse; and the thought I would leave with you is be tactful and de-leave with you is, be tactful and de-voted to your work.

I see your class motto is "Perserverance," a most excellent watchword. One of ordinary ability in any profession, with perseverance and devotion to their work, is bound to succeed. It may come slowly, but it is sure to True Devotion to Work.

There, was once an artist whose works were the envy of all other artists. He gave to his paintings a character and finish which none other could produce. It seemed to be due to shades of red which he worked into his pictures. His secret was discovered only after his death. There was found upon his chest an open wound which he kept alive, and from it took his life blood to produce the shades he could in no other way obtain. That is devotion to work.

Not long ago a case of malignant diptheria in a young child was cared for by a nurse. The case was so violent that the family had to be excluded from the room. The child, accustomed to rest much in its mother's arms, was very restless unless the nurse held it; and on visiting it one morning I found that for twelve hours the nurse had sat almost motheristics. hours the nurse had sat almost motionless in the chair, holding that child tight in her arms, inhaling constantly its poisonous breath, knowing she was every instant exposing herself to a fatal malady. When I remonstrated, she replied: "We must save the child: for if it dies it will kill its frail mother." Talk of heroism on the battlefield, with an applauding public looking on—there in that room was a frail little woman who showed as great heroism as the man who stands before the cannon.

Now in bidding you Good-night, I want to say—and I know I voice the want to say—and I know I voice the sentiments of all the trustees—we are proud of our hospital; we are proud of its management; we are proud of its nurses; and we are specially proud of this the first graduating class; and whether you remain with the hospital or take up private work, we wish you all success. And if you ever need advice or encouragement, come to us, for we shall always feel deeply interested in your welfare.

Although the work at the hospital may be through, unless some of you remain, yet you have not finished your study, as there is the great school of experience to go through, but from your work here it is known that none of you will be found wanting. Where your work here it is known that none of you will be found wanting. Wherever you may be, you must remember that you are engaged in the highest calling, the relieving of suffering is your task. We shall also have an interest in you and the greatest reward which can come to you is to be privileged to hear the Master say: Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, ye have done it unto me.

He again congratulated them as he handed the diplomas to the members of the class. The class pins were pinned on by Dr. Jennie G. Purmort as each one received their diploma.

After another selection by the orchestra there was a reception during which the large number took occasion to congratulate the members of the class and the guests were shown about the administration building. It had been planned to have dancing from 9.30 until 11.30, but owing to the drowning of Dr. H. C. K. Millspaugh on Wednesday evening it was not held. The members of the class are Bessie Theodorn Farrell. Agnes May Conlan, Mary J. Gallagher, Kate Bradley, Mary E. Daggett, James Nelson Sterry and John G. Daggert.

ON CENTRAL VERMONT. in Addition to Passenge Traffic Resumed-New York Boats

There seemed to be an appreciable improvement in the strike situation on the Central Vermont road on Thursday, as in addition to the passenger trains a number of freights were run in both directions. This was the first time freights had been sent over the line in three days. There was no trouble here.

After having been stopped for one night, the New York boats of the road resumed their freight service on Passenger Trains Are Running. Thursday morning trains were again run out with crews of strikebreakers in charge. The mail train left, New London at 4.45 o'clock on schedule time, as did the 9.40 train, No. 2. The train due here at noon arrived nearly on schedule time.

Injured New Men. Up in Brattleboro they are not using the new men well, as is evidenced by the fact that two of them were brought to New London from Brattleboro on Thursday afternoon much the worse for wear. The men passed through here on the Central Vermont train due here at noon, which was several minutes late. Both were badly bruised from the rough treatment received at the hands of the people in that place. The strike at Brattleboro took quite a serious turn Thursday. High Cost of Low Living. A New York dealer has explained that what he sells is a "pound package" of butter and not a pound of butter. The weight of the carton contributes to make the pound. The con-sumer, as a rule, probably senses no such distinction. He supposes he is getting a pound of butter. In the course of the comprehensive investigation which the New York authorities are now making into "trade customs" of this nature, hams and bacon have reached. It is revealed that a pound package of sliced bacon often contains less than twelve ounces of bacon, while less than twelve ounces of bacon, while strips of bacon and hams, comfortably wrapped, are short by from one to three pounds of the declared weights. It may not be unfair that the purchaser should be charged for the sanitary mummy cloth, but he ought to be advised exactly as to what he is paying for. In any case, the wrappings ought not to fetch the price of pork. It is estimated that the wrappings, material and labor cost the packers about one cent a pound, while ham is sold at around thirty cents.—Providence Bulletin.
